These finds, pieced together as best they might be in a hurry, led Egan to say the bomb was made of a piece of three-inch gas pipe toaded with dynamite and slugs, the whole carried in a cheap dress suitense, the newspaper being used to prevent the weapon from rattling about.

By MRS. GEORGE DE WITT MOULSON. The greatest danger in such attacks as these posters seek to foment comes from that type of individual of which there must be so many in this country. This is the class of person which is visibly affected by the posters, and which, further stirred to action by mass meetings and speeches.

Impatient of a proper appeal, the sponsors of these signs tave further stirred irresponsible persons by such mass meetings as that held at Madison Square Garden, which Mr. Bryan saw fit to indorse by his presence.

We all know that there are many people more kindhearted than thoughtful, who, stirred by the frightful slaughter in Europe, believe that an embargo upon arms might bring this war to a bitter end. But we believe that every one should respect the law as laid down by the government through

It was 6 o'clock Tuesday evening when "Mr. Hendricks" made his last visit to the Syosset station. Carnes told him that two packages and a trunk had come for him, but that the office had closed at 5 o'clock. He yielded a point to the insistent "Mr. Hendricks" and delivered the packages and trunk. "Mr. Hendricks" thanked him profusely and declared that Carnes would not be bothered again by telephone calls regarding the shipment.

There was one package of dynamite, Carnes said, one of fuses and a small trunk, so light that he thought it must be empty.

Carnes unlocked the Syosset station at midnight to permit an examination of his records. It was found that "Mr. Hendricks" got 120 pounds of dynamite, with caps and fuses enough to emin a score of bombs. The authority of the statement of the second of the s

Bomb a Powerful One.

After this prediminary examination of the building Egan and Healey went buck to the place where the bomb had exploded. Carefully the debris was searched with the aid of electric pocket lamps and gasolene flares. The first find was a cap such as is used to step a gas pipe. That came a lot of slugs, pluga commonly used by gas fitters, and numerous acraps of canvas and cardboard, together with bits of what seemed to be a brass lock and some rivets.

Yesterday Mr. Carnes's attention was called to the coincidence of names, and he was shown a photograph of Holt. He said without hesitation that it was a likeness of "Mr. Hendricks," the man who got the dynamite on Tuesday.
